New Overcoat is Sensible

Society Brand Clothes

Let's all take a good long breath of relief—the new overcoat model is sensible.

It follows the line of the figure—but it isn't a corsetcoat; not by a long chalk.

Just outlines the figure; looks manly; has ginger; is not fashion-plateish.

That is the University Model

Athletic young fellows will like it. Staid men of sober taste will like it.

Fabrics are splendid too.

Soft refined weaves and equally soft and refined patterns mark them.

Rich plain colors, quiet checks, mixtures as modest as the mist of morning, plaids that have true good taste.

The way an overcoat hangs from the shoulders decides its good looks and good fit. Nobody knows quite so well how to do the trick as Society Brand and Hickey Freeman.

Whoever asks proofs will find it ready in this big family of overcoats at $15 and $18.

There is true and excellent value at each price but we think more men will be more pleased with those coats at

$20 $22.50 $25

You'll know why we think this, when you see the coats.

ALLIES PLEDGED TO SAVE SERVIA

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Paris, Nov. 3.—England and France will save Servia.

Announcement to this effect was made in the chamber of deputies today by Premier Briand in the first declaration of policy he has made since he assumed the stewardship of the government.

When the new premier appeared in the chamber to read to the members his statement concerning the new ministry's policies he was wildly cheered.

"England and France are determined to act in closer union than ever before," said M. Briand.

"We are going to act in closer cooperation and more speedily than we have before in order to save Servia. Servia is going to be saved by us."

"Germany's fate may be delayed but it cannot be avoided. Germany is fated to suffer defeat."

"Transparent, clear cut, rapid decisions and the prompt execution of them shorn of all vain formalities, hesitation and uncertainty—these are the things to which we are going to apply our minds and all our energies in the future."

"The government's task is to utilize all the vital forces of the nation for the war and thus victory will be attained for us."

Everyone must help, declared M. Briand and at the same time he served solemn warning upon the people that any weakness will be strongly punished.

Continuing, the premier said: "Everyone must respond. All lack of discipline will be energetically repressed. Weakness will be punished."

"Such is the government's program."

"Never has France had an army worthier to conquer."

"The government intends to furnish its heroes with everything necessary to accomplish their task. Soldiers and their leaders are united in mutual confidence to out-vie one another in courage and sacrifice for country. The loftiest qualities of our race are being manifested daily in the trenches."

"The bravery of the French soldiers daily adds new rays to France's aureole of glory."

"Until the aim assigned to them is accomplished, our men will fight with the fullest confidence in the master hand of their great chief (Gen. Joffre) sharing his quiet faith in final success."

Premier Briand showed that France is fully aroused to the dangers facing the entente alliance, and is prepared to make any sacrifices.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

1397—A Simple and Becoming Style.

Girl's Dress With Sleeve in Either of Two Lengths.

White pique, linen or madras would be nice for this dress, but it is also appropriate for gingham, lawn, percale, chambray, and other wash materials. The skirt shows smart plaits at the fronts and sides, and is joined to the long waist under a shaped belt. The lines of this model are very pleasing, and the design is easy to develop. One could make this of blue chambray, with feather-cutting for decoration in a contrasting color, or of brown linen with white pique for collar and cuffs. The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. It requires 3 yards of 44 inch material for a 6 year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Catalogue Notice.

Send 10 cents in silver or stamps for our up to date 1915-1916 large Fall and Winter Catalogue, containing over 400 designs of Ladies', Misses' and Children's Patterns, as well as the latest embroidery designs, also a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, giving valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

Gray Wins His Suit.

The $4,000 that Asa G. Gray received from the late Jacob H. Turner of Mombas was a gift, not a loan, according to the sealed verdict rendered this morning at the opening of supreme court by the jury before whom was tried the suit brought by Mrs. Gertrude A. Turner to recover the money from Mr. Gray on the grounds that it was a loan made by her husband to him. A motion to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial will be heard later by the court. Cunningham & Traver represented Mrs. Turner while Howard Chipp and V. B. Van Wagoner appeared for Mr. Gray. At the first trial of the suit last March the jury were unable to agree on a verdict.

FROM VICTORY TO VICTORY.

The election returns prove that the Republican party, which some people thought was killed three years ago, has recovered its old-time strength. The Progressives have come back to the fold. Not even Roosevelt himself can lead them astray again. It is as certain as anything can be on this earth that next year will see the Grand Old Party firmly in control of the Government in Washington and in all the States except those which are kept Democratic by fear of the negro vote.

This has a tremendous meaning for everybody. Coming event, cast their shadows before. There is bound to be almost immediately a lessening of the terror in which business has been kept so long. We expect that it will very soon be easier for the workmen to find employment again. There is no end of work to be done in this country and our ability to lead hundreds of millions to Europe shows that we have no lack of capital to carry on enterprises which will increase many fold the demand for laborers. The dark days are nearly over. In a couple of years from now we shall be looking back at these dismal times and wondering how we endured them.

THE CONSTITUTION.

It is a misfortune to the people of the State of New York that the proposed new Constitution was defeated, and the worst part of it is that there seems to be no use in trying it over again. In our hold-over Constitution it is provided that in the election of 1916 there shall be submitted to the voters the question, "Shall there be a convention to revise the Constitution and amend the same?" and that in case of an affirmative vote delegates to such a convention shall be elected the following year. We believe that this question will be determined in the negative, since it is not good business to spend half a million dollars or more in preparing a Constitution which is sure to be defeated if it offers any marked improvement over present conditions.

Any effort to get a Constitution such as we ought to have necessarily carries with it the proposition to abolish useless offices by the hundred and shear many individuals of power. Of course, the place-holders whose tenure is threatened can be counted on to put up a strong fight, while the taxpayers whom it is designed to benefit are apathetic. Moreover, every fanatic who failed to get his particular hobby endorsed joins the opposition out of the promptings of revenge.

The only way to improve conditions and check the appalling growth of taxes is to take up one thing at a time. With one clear-cut issue submitted at a time there is a good chance of securing an affirmative vote, because fewer elements flock to the opposition. It is highly discreditable to the voters of the Empire State that this is so, but there is no use in blinking facts, and for some years to come we shall see the time of the Legislature largely taken up with work which it ought not to be obliged to undertake.

SUFFRAGE IS SETTLED

The woman suffrage leaders who have been so active recently are giving out newspaper interviews in which they say that they "have only begun to fight." Such talk is pure nonsense. Their "cause" is now to all intents and purposes a dead issue. The crazy ideas which pervade the sparsely settled Western States have no effective following in the conservative East. To believe this one has but to look over the returns of the suffrage elections held in the East during the last few years. Here they are:

State	Year	Majority
Ohio	1912	57,455
Ohio	1914	182,993
Michigan	1912	750
Michigan	1913	26,114
Michigan	1914	61,474
Wisconsin	1914	10,104
Nebraska	1914	110,000
Missouri	1914	9,481
N. Dakota	1914	11,074
S. Dakota	1914	51,272
New Jersey	1915	51,272

It will be seen that even the West is not solid for woman suffrage. The returns of this week's election are printed in our news columns today, and are quite as emphatic as those in the table above. It is evident that in our own State no Legislature would be justified in submitting this question again for years to come, if ever, since there is no reason for supposing that public sentiment will change.

Let us all give thanks that the adverse majority in our State was so big. There is nothing so distasteful to a good man as to get into arguments with or about women. Men like to idealize their women folk and hate to mention their weak points. It is a shame that such an issue as suffrage should ever be raised. It is a cheering fact that we shall not have to go through another experience like this year's very soon. Apparently the leaders are going to keep right on talking, but fortunately nobody need take the trouble to answer them.

"How did they all pose of your husband's case, Mrs. Nurch?" "Oh, they'll have to let him go, of course. You see he waived examination."—Buffalo Express.

"Did that alienist prove that you were crazy?" "No," replied the defendant; "but he admitted that he was nearly so before the lawyer got through with him."—Washington Star.

"Old top, I have been assigned to ask you to join our Society for the Consideration of Cosmic Forces." "Gee, that sounds terrific in a low-brow like me. What is the object of your society?" "I dunno. I suppose to give a banquet every now and then."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Old Married One—"You will learn, my dear, that men are most contrary creatures." The Young Married One—"Oh, I know that already." The Old Married One—"Indeed?" The Young Married One—"Yes; I cook things my husband likes and yet he doesn't like the things I cook."—Life.

Protecting His Comrade.

Two boys, one the possessor of a permit, were fishing on a certain estate when a gamekeeper suddenly darted from a thicket. The lad with the permit uttered a cry of fright, dropped his rod and ran on at top speed. The gamekeeper was led a swift chase. Then, worn out, the boy halted. The man seized him by the arm and said between pants: "Have you a permit to fish on this estate?" "Yes, to be sure," said the boy, quietly. "You have?" Then show it to me." The boy drew the permit from his pocket. The man examined it and frowned in perplexity and anger. "Why did you run when you had this permit?" he asked. "Pa, but the other boy ran away," was the reply. "He didn't have none."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Good Times.

Henry Ford, praising the good times in New York, said:

"The good times are spread the country over. There isn't a spot that hasn't got its share."

"Anybody who can contemplate these times with optimism must have a disposition like the bookkeeper's wife."

"The bookkeeper said one day at dinner:

"Gee, I wish I could get up an appetite for once!"

"Oh, go on, John," said his wife, impatiently. "What do you want an appetite for? It would only give you more despondency."—New York World.

Antiquated.

William Jennings Bryan said at a Lincoln luncheon:

"Mr. Roosevelt and his friends stick to the old fallacy, the fallacy that is now, for the thousandth time, so thoroughly disproved that the best way to secure peace is to prepare for war."

"Germany to secure peace prepared for war. So did Russia. So did France. So did England. Result, failure."

"Wouldn't you think, then, that people would not decide to try to secure peace by preparing for peace? You'd think so, wouldn't you? But Mr. Roosevelt and his friends clinging to the old, old methods, remind me of Bill Bailey's colt."

"Bill Bailey had a colt that he fed in a box stall and watered at a trough in the yard. Then, when the animal was six or seven months old, he put it out to pasture on the other side of the creek."

"That colt, every time it got thirsty, did what do you think? Began to eat its hay. It swam the creek and went up to the trough in the yard for a drink."—Chicago Record-Herald.

SUFFRAGE LOSES IN PENNSYLVANIA

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 3.—Leaders of the suffragists, undismayed by the defeat of the woman suffrage amendment in Pennsylvania by a majority estimated at 175,000, declared today that the fight will go on. A great mass meeting will be held in Philadelphia tonight, when the opening gun in the next campaign will be fired.

Suffrage was the big issue in the Pennsylvania election, although the returns show that the Republicans have tightened their grip on the state.

In Philadelphia the Republican organization won easily. Thomas B. Smith being elected mayor over George D. Porter by a majority estimated at nearly 100,000.

The republican victory in Philadelphia increased the strength of the Penrose faction which led the fight against the Franklin party and democrats.

Analysis of the returns on suffrage shows the greatest opposition came from the coal-mining communities. In the great industrial city of Pittsburgh, where it was expected that the suffrage amendment would receive the solid support of the workmen, a majority of approximately 20,000 was given against it.

In Cambria and the high counties where there are big steel companies employing thousands of workmen, big majorities were given against suffrage. This was considered a remarkable thing as socialist sentiment is strong in the industrial communities and many socialist organizations endorsed suffrage and pledged their members to vote for it.

Late returns indicated that the suffrage amendment got small majorities in only six counties. In many communities the vote was three to one against the enfranchisement of women.

In addition to the proposed suffrage amendment four other amendments to the constitution were voted on and it is believed all carried.

Anti suffragists are jubilant over the outcome of the election, particularly in the eastern part of the state. The majority against suffrage in Philadelphia county is estimated at 100,000.

Charges of fraud have been made and it was declared that warrants would be sworn out for three municipal officers charging them with violation of the Shorn law.

The vote for superior court judges resulted in the election of Judges Orady and Head and of J. Henry Williams, of Philadelphia.

Incendiary Fire Alleged.

(Special to Freeman.)

Saugerties, Nov. 3.—Incendiarism is hinted at in connection with a fire which destroyed a barn, garage and feed house on the place of Chris Schlinter in Cementon. The blaze was discovered in the barn at 10 o'clock last night, and despite the efforts of a volunteer bucket brigade the structure with its contents were destroyed. Two horses perished in the flames, which spread to the feed house and garage nearby. Schlinter had been making a fight against the saloons in connection with the local option election in the town and his friends today expressed the belief his barn was set afire in revenge. Cementon contains a large number of foreign residents, Austrians and Poles predominating.

"The Peasant Girl" Coming.

Edith Thayer, who starred for two seasons in the Emma Trentini role in "The Firefly," and followed her at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre last spring in "The Peasant Girl," heads the company in the Leo Stein Oskar Nedbal Rudolph Friml comic opera that comes to the opera house next Tuesday matinee and night. A large chorus of pretty girls and many men, who can sing, and a special orchestra of picked musicians, complete the ensemble.

And Yet They Say Authors Are Poor. Authors may not now spurn the offer of money for their work, but they really do sometimes fail to cash checks, according to the cashier of the Century company. "I don't know what they do with the checks," he said in complaint to a friend the other day. "unless they frame them. Though acknowledgments have proved the receipt of the checks, I am always carrying on the books corresponding accounts that I can't close up for months, sometimes years. I remember especially one check issued to a famous actor and author. He died a number of years ago. The check was made out anew to the estate. Still it is uncashed. There is more than one author I'd bless if he-it is usually he—would only go and get his money."

Ready For the Worst.

"A woman in a parish where I lived," said an English clergyman, "used each day to prepare herself for the worst. I was complimenting her one day on the extreme tidiness of the house even early in the morning."

"Yes," she said: "I always like to have my bedrooms done heavily, for, as I alius sez, you never knows what may happen. 'ow soon one of the children may be brought 'ome in a fit or with a broken leg, and, as I alius sez, it don't matter what happens, so long as you've got a bedroom to put 'em into.'"

—Cornhill Magazine.

Chivalry.

"Do you know," said the particularly well groomed and elaborately virginal lady in the full bloom of her second youth, "that I have the most wonderful gardener in the world—the tenderest hearted not only of gardeners, but of men? He has always made me up a very special bouquet on my birthday and presented it to me in person. But ever since I was thirty—well, he's only given me a birthday bouquet every third year."—New York Post.

They catch the public's first impression and arrest its attention. Clothes often make or mar an individual's future.

THOSE who step each morning into the Sterling Factory do not exchange the daylight of the open streets for the musty gloom of some dark corner.

They come into kitchens flooded with light—kitchens as sunny as modern construction can make them.

From this clean, bright home Sterling comes to you—a pure, finely-flavored confection.

This thought, no doubt, will reassure you in looking for the 7th point of Sterling excellence.

DUST CLOUDS OF ALASKA.

Volcano Ashes Make the Hills Appear to Be Snow Clad.

As we approached Kodiak strange dark clouds were seen obscuring the horizon at several points, one of which was so heavy and black that it resembled smoke from a great forest fire. Captain Jensen started us by explaining that this was dust blown by the stiff breezes from the lofty hills all about us. These hills seemed covered with snow, but the whitish deposit proved to be ashes rained down several feet deep upon all this section during the eruption of Mount Katmai in June, 1912. Katmai is still smoking.

The sun looked like a dull silver dollar as it shone through the ash mist. The dust cloud was so thick that it held our steamer up for four hours until the way was clear. Passing your hand over the rail of the boat, you found your fingers streaked with the impalpable gray powder. When we landed at Kodiak we found piles of soft gray ashes and large and small pieces of light, friable stone, like pumice stone, which had been thrown out by the volcano. The explosion of the volcano was heard at Valdez, 400 miles away from Kodiak, and sounded like a rumbling. It was followed by a deposit of fine ashes in Valdez.

In Kodiak the ashes covered everything. They half buried Colonel Blodgett's big cannery on the dock and put him temporarily out of business. They completely filled up a pond four feet deep which had been the skating resort for many years of the children of Kodiak.—John A. Schleicher in Leslie's.

Turpentine and Vaseline.

Equally effective and probably more convenient to apply than the familiar mustard plaster is a mixture of equal quantities of vaseline and turpentine. The vaseline melted in a saucepan over the fire and mixed well with the turpentine. It should be applied warm and rubbed well into the skin. The clothing being protected as the ointment leaves an oily stain.

His Failure.

"Ah! What scanty knowledge we have of what the future holds in store for us!" solemnly remarked Professor Fate. When I was a freckle-faced lad, with the nail of one or the other of my superior toes chronically turned back like the clasp of an old-fashioned portemonnaie, how little did I realize that I should grow up and not be president!—Kansas City Star.

FALL OF NISH EXPECTED HOURLY

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, Nov. 3.—Although Premier Asquith declared in parliament that the allies have pledged themselves to save Serbia, the situation in King Peter's war-ridden domain was more critical today than at any time yet.

While the allies have landed troops at Kavala for a second invasion of southern Bulgaria, dispatches report progress for the Austro-Hungarian, German and Bulgarian armies in Serbia.

The fall of Nish is expected hourly, as advices from Athens say that the Bulgarians and Germans have succeeded in getting their heaviest Austrian guns in position to bombard the Serb capital and that it is being battered by the hurricane of projectiles.

South of Vele (Koprivica) after very bloody hand to hand fighting, the Bulgarians have advanced and occupied part of Bobouina pass.

The Serbians are falling back upon Prilep, and Monastir before the advance of the Bulgars but are fighting desperately.

South of Kragujevatz and west of the Morava river, the Austro-German forces are driving the Serbians into the mountains.

Severe storms are now raging over northern Serbia and the weather is very cold and wet. Heavy guns, ammunition trains and the marching of mighty masses of men have turned the roads into trails of deep mud. At some points the engineers have to build plank roads before the big guns can be moved. Snow is falling in the mountains.

Anglo-French warships continue to bombard the Bulgarian coast at intervals. A French warship on Tuesday shelled a Bulgarian troop train on the railway between Dedagatch and Xanthi.

SENSES OF TREES.

Something Almost Human in Some of the Plants' Actions.

Mr. James Rodway, who is the curator of the British Guiana museum and an eminent botanist, declares that plants have at least three of our five senses—feeling, taste and smell—and that certain tropical trees smell water from a distance and will move straight toward it.

But trees not in the tropics can do as well. A resident of an old Scotch mansion, says a writer in the Scotsman, found the waste pipe from the house repeatedly choked. Lifting the slabs in the basement paving, he discovered that the pipe was completely encircled by poplar roots. They belonged to a tree that grew some thirty yards away on the opposite side of the house.

Thus the roots had moved steadily toward the house and had penetrated below the foundation and across the basement wall they reached their goal, the waste pipe, 150 feet away. Then they had placed a cement joining and had worked their way in long, tapering lengths inside the pipe for a considerable distance beyond the house.

There seems something almost human in such unerring instinct and perseverance in surmounting obstacles.

Europeans Are Book Buyers.

In the United States only one person in 1,000 buys a book in the course of a year, while in Great Britain it is one in 2,500; in France it is about the same; in Germany and Japan it is rather better, and in Switzerland it is one in 372. Cheaper books, in paper covers, account for some of this difference; but, whatever the cause, it remains true that the Europeans buy twice as many books per capita as we do.—Atlantic Monthly.

Fish Lack Grains.

CHANGED ONE LETTER.

How a Serious Political Crisis in Canada Was Averted.

At the period when British Columbia was threatening to withdraw from the Dominion of Canada because the Carman settlement had been ignored by the Mackenzie administration the late Lord Dufferin took part in a public function in Quebec.

While the procession was moving through the principal streets a gentleman, breathless with excitement, hurried up to his excellency's carriage to say a "rebel" arch had been placed across the road so as to identify the viceroy with the approval of the disloyal inscription thereon.

"Can you tell me what words there are on the arch?" quietly asked Dufferin.

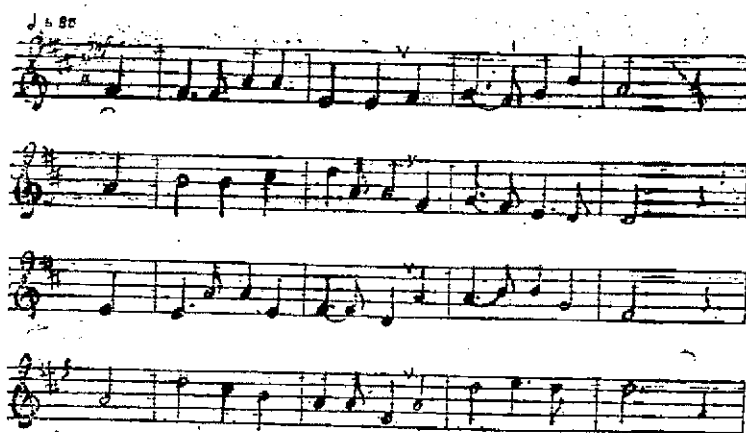

"Oh, yes!" replied his informant. "They are 'Carman Terms or Separation.'"

"Send the committee to me," commanded his excellency. "Now, gentlemen," said he, with a smile to the committee, "I'll go under your beautiful arch on one condition. I won't ask you to do much, and I beg but a trifling favor. I merely ask that you alter one letter in your motto. Turn the S into an R—make it 'Carman Terms or Reparation'—and I will gladly pass under it."

The committee yielded, and eventually Dufferin contrived to smooth over the difficulties and to reconcile the malcontents.

JOHNNIE WIEMAN.

LOS ANGELES WOMAN BELIEVES BOY ADOPTED BY SHEPARD ONE OF HER TWINS.

Los Angeles, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Jean Shepherd Wieman, who resided in Philadelphia until two years ago, believes she is the mother of little John Doe 104, adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Finley Shepard of New York and named Finley J. Shepard, Jr.

While in Philadelphia, she says, twins were born to her, but according to the physician, one was born dead. Her husband was told to say nothing of the matter to keep his wife from worrying and she did not know until six months later that she had given birth to two children instead of one. There was no suspicion that the child was not dead, however, until she saw the picture of the boy adopted by the Shepards in the paper. The striking resemblance of the little fellow to her son "Johnnie" Wieman, reminded her that neither she nor her husband had ever seen the dead twin. According to her story she has been visited several times by detectives from New York who would not tell the object of their visits, but who seemed to be searching for information concerning a missing child.

The only oatmeal of its kind

Before H-O came, it took hours of cooking to make oatmeal fit to eat. It was this cooking problem which led the first producers of H-O Oatmeal to reason this way:

"Many housewives serve oatmeal under-cooked. Others cook it all night, boiling away flavor, wasting fire and making this dish soggy and unappetizing.

"We will do over 2 hours of the needed cooking ourselves. We will do it in sealed cookers retaining the full oats flavor. We will then have in H-O the one oatmeal which can be thoroughly cooked in only 20 minutes."

To this day, H-O remains the only oatmeal cooked in sealed cookers which develops to its fullest the rich, oats flavor.

Our process of selecting the grain, blending the best oats from different parts of the country, removing much of the moisture, steam-cooking to dextrinize the starch, sterilizing the finished product—these are some of the things which make H-O such a delicious, satisfying breakfast food.

And—with all its flavor—it costs less than half-cent a dish!

SAUGERTIES RURAL SCHOOLS EXHIBIT

The auditorium of the high school building in Saugerties was on Monday afternoon the Mecca toward which the children of the rural schools of the township turned their happy expectant faces and gaily wended their way bearing their treasures of field corn which they had raised in their home gardens during the summer vacation. Some came a-foot, some came a-wheel some in carriages and others by courtesy of the district trustees came on hay wagons. With few exceptions, all the schools of the town were represented. The school having the greatest representation was No. 16 (North Flatbush), the principal of the school being present with twenty-six pupils.

Although the hour set for opening was 1:30, many of the teachers found it very difficult to get the children and their exhibits of school work to the village before that hour, so that it was 2 o'clock before all were assembled. At that time the high school orchestra played a beautiful selection which was greatly enjoyed and applauded, after which the following program was given.

Sanzuk—America, children from all schools, accompanied by the high school orchestra.

Recitation—A Mortifying Mistake, Little Marion Middleton, District No. 4.

Recitation—A Joke on the Garden, Marguerite Bishop, District No. 1.

Recitation—One, Two, Three, Five, pupils of District No. 5.

Song—Sweet and Low, three day pupils of District No. 21.

Reading—The Story of Baby Corn, Lucile Henselder, District No. 15.

Recitation—Little Patriots, two little patriots of District No. 6.

Rehearsal of the Village Choir, six pupils of District No. 8.

Singing—Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean, children of all schools, accompanied by high school orchestra.

At the conclusion of the program W. H. Hook, manager of the Ulster County Farm Bureau and E. A. Van Slyke, superintendent of the Saugerties village schools, proceeded to judge the merits of the corn crop raised by the children. The prizes for the contest, five dollars for the first prize, three dollars for the second, and two dollars for the third, were contributed by our generous fellow citizen, Martin Cantine, who is always interested in good work and all that pertains to progress. The judges after careful consideration awarded the prizes as follows: To Harold Dederick of District No. 7, Ashbury, first prize; to Olive Snyder of District No. 4, Mt. Marion, second prize; to Mabel Lockwood of District No. 21, Fish Creek, third prize.

Mr. Hook in presenting the prizes spoke at some length in regard to the farmers of the future and encouraged the children to put forth a greater effort in the agricultural contests which will be held in the future.

Herbert Carl of Kingston, who was in the audience, presented a special prize of two dollars to Emma Post, of the Quarryville school, who had made the finest collection of wild flowers, pressed and mounted, having over two hundred varieties.

The audience was then invited to inspect the exhibits of school work which had been brought in by the teachers of the various schools. All of the work was exceptionally good, and the teachers and pupils deserve great credit for the excellence of the exhibition.

During the time the judges were considering the comparative merits of the corn crop and the guests and children were viewing the school exhibits, the high school orchestra played several beautiful selections. The teachers and children of the rural schools take this opportunity to express to the orchestra and to Mrs. Story, the leader, their appreciation of the music, and to thank all who contributed in making a success of the harvest day.

Mrs. Alice Crispell and mother have returned to their home in this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Stoddeman left for Staten Island last week where they will open a drug store. Their many friends wish them success in their new undertaking.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Canfield and daughter attended the lecture given in the hall Sunday evening.

Mrs. Edwin J. LeFever spent Sunday at Brown's Station.

The many friends of Miss J. Louise Canfield will be pleased to know she won the scenario contest advertised in Poughkeepsie. The name of the Photoplay is "Just a Girl From Your Home Town" and will be played at Cohen's theater in the near future. Tremendous interest has been shown throughout the entire contest and much credit is given Miss Canfield for writing such a story.

For a Damp Room.

When papering a damp room the following hint will be useful: Take half a pint of alum and half a pint of glue-size. Dissolve each together in a pint of boiling water, take off the oil paper and wash the wall once or twice with the solution; when dry it can be papered. No damp will ever show through the solution.

Her Father Noticed It.

"I suppose it is hardly necessary for me to tell you, sir, that I am in love with your daughter," said a trembling suitor. "Not at all, you man!" replied her father. "Furthermore, I've seen enough idiotic symptoms in the last month to convince me that your passion is reciprocated."

Dance to the Vibrations.

Vibrations of the floor caused by the playing of an orchestra are said to be sufficient for deaf persons to dance to. This at least is the explanation given for a dancing exhibition of deaf couples held in San Francisco recently. Others, not susceptible to these vibrations, fall into the rhythm by watching.

"What do you think about national preparedness?" asked the militant person. "I dare say it's a very good thing for a nation," replied Mr. Twobble, thoughtfully, "but in my relations with Mrs. Twobble, I find a policy of nonresistance more conducive to peace and harmony in the family circle."

EXPERTS BELIEVE SUFFRAGE DEAD

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Nov. 3.—Political experts today, after analyzing the returns from yesterday's election in the states where the question of woman suffrage was at issue, declared that there was little doubt that the plan of the suffrage leaders to secure nation-wide suffrage through a constitutional amendment is doomed to failure. The various organizations of women will move their headquarters to this city shortly and will hold a series of conventions early next month to endeavor to line up congress for their proposed amendment. However, officials here declare that they are certain to lose.

Rejection of suffrage by four important states such as New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, with their powerful congressional representation here will be followed, political experts say, by the delegations from those states voting almost solidly against any resolution to submit a constitutional amendment to the states. It is pointed out that since 1912 eleven states definitely have rejected suffrage and that the south is almost solidly against it. With this as an argument and President Wilson taking the position that the question is a state and not a national issue, it is not believed here that congress will permit the constitutional amendment to be submitted to the people.

New Jersey, which rejected suffrage two weeks ago has twelve representatives; New York has 43; Massachusetts has 16 and Pennsylvania has 36. The other states which definitely have rejected suffrage since 1912 with their congressional representation are Michigan, 12; Missouri, 16; Nebraska, 6; North Dakota 3; Ohio 21; South Dakota 3; and Wisconsin 11.

Three fourths of the states would reject a constitutional amendment on suffrage and the majority of politicians here insist that the result yesterday in the three states which voted on the question and rejected it by very large majorities, absolutely dooms the plan of the suffragists to secure favorable congressional action.

Nevertheless the suffrage leaders decline to concede defeat. They declare that they will carry the fight direct into congress as soon as it convenes and that every individual member of the senate and the house will be button-holed and pleaded with. The suffrage leaders insist that their showing yesterday entitles them to "another chance" and they will fight hard to secure it.

So far as the other results of yesterday's election are concerned the Republican leaders here are jubilant. They insist that the drift back to their party is now so pronounced that control of the next congress is certain. The White House refused to make any statement early today but it was said that as soon as complete revised returns are available one will probably be issued. One thing which both sides seemed to agree on was that the defeat of the New York constitution has eliminated Elihu Root from consideration as a presidential candidate. He made a fight for the constitution and lost and the result, leaders here say, will extend far beyond the state boundaries.

PEGASUS PETERS

The Story of a Nickname

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Finley Lee was laboriously reading items from a week old newspaper when his tongue stung against a new word.

"Say, Peters," he interjected, "you had some school, didn't you? What's this spell—Pegasus—uh?"

"Pegasus," replied Peters glibly. "Name of a battle-ship," queried Finley guardedly for a new patent medicine?

"Name of a fellow," explained Peters vaguely, for his schooling had been intermittent and varied by continual change of scene. His father had been a book agent, as well as a widower, and Peters' education had been marked by long gaps between cities. "Name of a fellow," he repeated more positively. "He was an inventor—intended shoe pegs," he ended, with a sudden burst of inspiration.

"Uh, huh, but it sounds kinder funny reading here—listen," and Finley Lee slowly read, "So Oscar Jones mounted his Pegasus and flew to some enchanted isle, where he composed another of his deathless poems." What do you make of that, Peters?

"Oh," answered Peters mildly, "same guy named an aeroplane after old Pegasus and now away to some island. I guess this Oscar Jones could write poetry."

"Yes, it says he wrote a deathless poem. I suppose that means one that's mild and gentle, without a killing in it."

But Peters, the authority on literature, smiled in a superior manner. "A deathless poem," he said, "is one you can't kill, no matter how much you'd like to."

"One of them ladylike poems that you'd like to fiddle with bullets, only it seems like a cowardly thing to do," growled old Roberts from his chair at the head of the mess table.

But that was not the end of the discussion at the Double X ranch. The next day Finley Lee met the pretty schoolteacher and showed her the newspaper clipping.

How she laughed when she heard Peters' definition of Pegasus! But she spent an agreeable half hour explaining to Finley Lee all about ancient mythology, and Finley retold the story to his pals, and immediately they dubbed the ebullient one "Pegasus Peters," and the name stuck to him.

One April morning Pegasus Peters awoke to the fact that he was in love. At first he had thought it was malaria and took quinine without result; then he met Miss Sally Barton again and danced with her and looked into her warm eyes, and as is the common fate of those who look too long into deep blue eyes, he fell in love.

The richness of bird songs, the scent of sage in the rare morning air, the brightness of his heart revealed the secret. So he scrubbed his handsome face and brushed his blond hair and actually blushed when he met his own gaze in the little mirror that was common property in the bunk house of the Double X.

"I say, Pegasus," drawled a voice behind him, "of course you want to look right pretty, but she ain't going to be here to breakfast, you know."

Peters whirled about, his face crimson.

"Who ain't going to be here to breakfast?" he challenged.

"Any lady you want name," evaded Finley Lee indignantly.

"I ain't naming any ladies, and it isn't healthy for you, either. You know, Finley," Peters tossed this over his shoulder as he went down the narrow stairway.

When his blond shoulders and sleek black hair had vanished Finley winked at himself in the glass.

"I wonder what he'd say if he knew that schoolmarm knew that Pegasus story? Lord how she did laugh, fit to kill. And him so innocent getting sweet on her. Poor old Pegasus!"

Pegasus Peters did not feel poor as he rode out into the glory of that spring morning. He was going over to the distant range to relieve Smithers, one of the fine riders.

As he rode he whistled and sang out of pure happiness. He had $500 in the left under his blanket shirt, and he had youth and health, and the boss had given him a horse quick to respond, he might awake some day to find himself home—old Roberts was talking about possum and going to live with his son in Nevada.

"I wonder if she would marry me?" he thought, "oh, please, I should cry or the moon, she's offed at herself."

"He thought," a voice interrupted his meditations. "Where you going, Pegasus? You ain't overlooked the fact that I'm waiting for you."

Smithers grinned as Peters shook off his day dreams and gazed surprisedly at the little doting the bushes, where the distant cowboys looked like men at horsemen.

"Oh, he said 'banky,' I didn't know it reached the camp."

Riding in your sleep, eh? "launched" he called, swinging into his saddle. Wake up, Pegasus! Big things today. Sooner or later you're going to bring some friends out, and they're going to take pictures of you and cowboy for some magazine back east. "Bye!"

Peters did not hear Smithers' farewell. His heart was beating thickly at the thought that she was coming—beautiful, blue-eyed Sally Barton—and he was instantly reborn of her eastern friends.

the April day lost its glory.

At noon he was eating lunch with Dan Harlow. Harlow was a mean spirited, black browed individual usually in deep trouble of some sort brought about by his own mischievousness.

Now he looked up at Peters through a tangle of bushy eyebrows and grinned.

"Say, Pegasus," he drawled, "do you always put salt in your coffee?"

"Only when I'm in fresh company," retorted Peters, calmly drinking the nauseous liquid.

"Might try sugar. 'Twould sweeten your disposition," went on the other. "Funnier, wasn't it, how you got the name of Pegasus?"

"That's an old joke now," returned Peters.

"I s'pose Finley told you how he asked Miss Barton if Pegasus was the name of an inventor and how she laughed fit to kill herself and she told him the true tale. And since then they call you Pegasus. She sure is some witty, pretty peach!"

Where had the April day vanished? Was the sun actually shining? It looked dark to him. A sudden dizziness came over him; his heart hurt somehow. Suddenly everything was clear to his mental vision.

Sally Barton had laughed at him—at him, the uneducated man who had made a fool of himself. She was not in love with him. He was only a target for her clever wit.

Pegasus Peters! So she had been the author of the nickname he had good naturedly accepted.

With white, set face lips compressed and a stony frown in the region of his heart, he rode to and fro guarding the grazing cattle.

Once he turned around and saw that Sally and her party had arrived. There were two men and a girl. The sun flashed on the lenses of three pairs of spectacles.

Of course Sally Barton's blue eyes were not thus disclosed. "Highbrows all!" growled Peters again, and his eyes glittered dangerously.

He rode away to the uttermost limits of the range.

The curiosity seekers would not find him here, he thought.

But he reckoned without Sally of the blue eyes and hair, white chin.

And while he sat there nursing the bitterness in his heart and hating all women because this one had proved deceitful her little voice fell upon his ears.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Peters," she called as her calico pony cantered up to him.

Peters doffed his sombrero and looked gravely down at her.

"How do you do?" he asked stiffly.

"Isn't it a glorious day?" bubbled Sally, looking very winsome in her blue serge skirt and snowy blouse.

"It's going to rain," he said, looking off toward the hazy ranges.

"Oh, don't say that!" he protested. "We're going to have such a lovely time taking pictures. Don't you want to be in a magazine photograph, Mr. Peters?"

"For more people to laugh at?" he flushed hotly. "No, thank you, Miss Barton. When you fasten a nickname on a man and make him a butt for jokes don't be surprised if he fails to value your friendship afterward."

He replaced his hat and rode away to a distant point, where he sat as though carved in stone. His face was white, and the muscles of his throat were drawn and rigid.

Sally, dumfounded, rode back to her friends.

A heavy roll of thunder out of the darkening sky brought fright to her face. "A thunderstorm!" she gasped.

"What shall we do? I am afraid and it's raining now."

"Follow your friends. They're going over to Reggar's cave. Shorty's shown them the way. You better get outter this, Miss Barton. These critters are getting ready to stampede."

He rode away, intent upon the business of the moment.

Sally Barton hesitated. She was afraid. Oh, for the protection of Peters' strong arm! But he must hate her if he believed she had made game of him.

Fifteen minutes later, when the herd had broken all bounds and gone rushing madly over the plains, Pegasus Peters saw a drenched little form dashing toward him. It was the calico pony, and on his back was a pale, drenched girl who called his name in sobbing sobs.

"Oh, I am so frightened!" she cried as he lifted her from the saddle and seated her before him, with her face hidden against his blue flannel breast.

"I hope you don't mind?" she shivered. "I don't mind," he said grimly, and amid the glare and crash of the storm he told her how he had awakened that April morning conscious of love and of the blow he had received from Harlow. "Of course I couldn't marry a wife who despised me," he said simply.

"Oh, it is not so!" she protested and told her side of the story. "I don't care how little book knowledge you have," she whispered. "You have my heart, Donald, and I don't want it back again."

The sun came out, and it was glorious once more.

"I shall always call you Pegasus when you are cross," she threatened when they rode home side by side, and Pegasus grinned happy assent.

Mercury Aids Plants.

A scientific investigator of Europe has discovered a new method of destroying fungus disease and house-hold pests by the use of mercury. In enclosed spaces the mercury is employed in the form of vapor. In other cases it is injected in metallic form directly into the circulating fluids of the plant. The growth of the plant is not only not disturbed, but in most cases actually assisted.

Origin of Comets.

Professor E. S. Strassler, director of the Copenhagen observatory, has carried out, with the aid of J. Braae, an investigation to determine whether comets come originally from interstellar space, as has been commonly supposed, or originate within the solar system. His method of search involves the backward projection of planetary perturbations for eight comets. The conclusion reached is that all comets heretofore observed have originated within the solar system.

Owing to an unfortunate omission, the Freeman failed to state in the report of the gifts to the Tuberculosis Hospital that the Misses Keasler, Stern, Kaplan and Freedman had also given the patients a happy afternoon of readings and music. Both of these entertainments were indeed appreciated.

A Halloween party was given by Franklin Hyatt of No. 56 Cedar street on Monday evening to his friends. The evening was pleasantly spent playing games in the good old Halloween fashion. Covers were laid for fifteen guests. Those present were Anna Rose, the honor guest of Whiteport, the Misses Loretta, Dora Longyear, Catherine, Eleanor Kerr, Weltha Wright, Loretta McGrath, Ruth Monroe, Franklin, Mortimer Hyatt, Francis Keough, Fred DuBois, Blair Muller, Ralph Gakenheimer, and Joseph Netherwood.

The Loyal Friends Aid Society held their regular monthly meeting at the Hebrew school last evening. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Four new members were admitted. After the considerable routine business was transacted a social hour was indulged in, consisting of dancing and the serving of refreshments. The club is invited to meet at the home of Miss Helen Barn at 29 Bond street on Thursday evening, November 4, to complete all arrangements for the bazaar and dance to be held at St. Mary's Hall November 9 and 10.

The regular meeting of the Saugerties Monday Club was held at the Market street on Monday first. The most important business transacted was the vote to double the annual amount of dues. The program for the month of November is "Household Economics." The committee in charge comprises Mrs. Cole, Mrs. Keeney, Mrs. R. B. Overbagh, Mrs. R. F. Overbagh. Papers on the "Evolution of Home Life in America" were read by Mrs. Overbagh and Mrs. Keeney. The club will meet on November 8 at the home of Mrs. R. B. Overbagh on Main street.

The employees of the Fessenden Shirt Company were given a Halloween masquerade party and dance at the factory Friday evening, September 29. There were about 35 couples present. Games were played until a late hour. The grand march was led by Nettie Myers and Harold E. Caldwell of New York. Dainty refreshments were served by six young ladies, Miss Naomi Barnhardt, Etta Bloom, Marguerite Reis, Mary Libolt, Nettie Myers, Rose Cole. Prizes were awarded to Nettie Myers for most patriotic; Miss Roxie Van Kleek, ladies' prettiest costume; Miss Rose Cole, second prettiest; Frank Oulton, gentleman's prettiest costume. Miss Julia Connor, Robert Brown, most comical; Miss Antonette Reese, pinning stem on pumpkin; Vernon Kelly, pinning tail on cat; Mary Libolt, finding greatest number of peanuts. After enjoying a very pleasant evening a picture was taken of the party; also a card which read "Votes for Women," in which all the ladies of the Fessenden Company are in favor.

The Gem Society of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church was very delightfully entertained on Friday evening, October 29, by Mrs. Edward Bonesteel. The guests, who were basked, were given burlap bags and taken on a trip to Washington to view the White House. This led them to the attic where the fun began. Here everything was cleverly decorated with cornstalks and jack-o'-lanterns and among the things which delighted the guests were "The Old Oaken Bucket" and a small brook. Some time was spent in fishing and other games, but the great event of the evening was a miscellaneous shower given to Miss Ida DeBors. There were many beautiful gifts of linen, silver and cut glass. After this they were all told to mask and then they were given refreshments, which had to be eaten as directed by the hostess. The bride-to-be has many wishes for a long and happy married life. Miss DuBois has for a number of years been a very active worker in the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church. She is a fine musician and a beautiful solo singer. When she leaves Kingston in the near future she will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends. The wedding will take place during the present month.

Ralston-Coddington. Mrs. Jennie Coddington and John Ralston were married at the parsonage of the M. E. Church in Walpole.

on Sunday evening by the Rev. W. H. Luffness. They will continue to reside in Walpole.

Miss Olive Kemp Mosher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Mosher of Amsterdam, N. Y., formerly of Ralston and Harrison Contant of Union Center, were married at Amsterdam on Sunday afternoon, October 31. Mr. and Mrs. Contant have gone on a wedding journey to Danbury, Conn.

Roberta-Fraser. Miss Nera Fraser and Edward Roberts of Cedarcliff were married in St. Mary's Church in Marlborough on Sunday by the Rev. James P. Hanley. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Fraser and the groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Roberts of Cedarcliff. For some time he has acted as representative for commission agents in New York. The bride was attended by Miss Jennie Roberts and Harry Fraser acted as best man, Mr. and Mrs. Roberts will spend the winter in Florida.

Uster Garden Club. There was an unusually largely attended meeting of the Uster Garden Club held at the Saugerties home of Mrs. James O. Winston on Tuesday afternoon. It was an ideal autumnal afternoon for the trip to Saugerties, which was made by auto, the mountains standing out in all their glory or royal purple and blue. The richness of the autumnal foliage also added to the beauty of the scene, especially after the party emerged from the charming approach to the house, through the avenue of evergreen trees. Following a short business session, Mr. Du Mond of Uster Park gave a most practical, clear and comprehensive talk on "Trees and Shrubs." What he had to say as to planting, transplanting, nurture, pruning, etc., was of unusual value, because he spoke with the authority of one who has had experience in this very locality, and his personal enthusiasm and regard for his friends in the tree world added much to the charm of the talk. Autumn leaves and flowers profusely and the guests were, late in the afternoon, served with an elaborate collation.

Lowell Club. The regular meeting of the Lowell Club was held with Mrs. Witter at her home on John street on Tuesday afternoon. The roll call was "Irish Wit and Humor" and was greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Moulton had the paper for the day, her subject being "Saint Patrick and the Monks." While the humorous possibilities of the subject had at first suggested themselves to the writer of the paper, a careful study of the life of Saint Patrick, soon changed her attitude. Born of noble Roman family, sold into captivity when a little child, Saint Patrick, like David, while tending his master's sheep, became well prepared for his later life work. Being of the people, he realized their needs and brought them the story of Christ with such power of persuasion and illustration of living, that many gave up their pagan gods and became loyal followers of the cross and of St. Patrick, whose life was devoted to the betterment of the people in every way. While not dwelling at length on the monasticism founded by Saint Patrick, their good work and influence were spoken of. The paper was listened to with the closest attention and appreciation. Miss Balthazar gave a reading, "St. Patrick's Breastplate," the prayer of the Irish saint, which in its twelve parts, like the breastplate of Aaron, was his shield against temptation. The music for the day was in charge of Mrs. Van Buren and Mrs. Bruyn and consisted of Irish songs. Next Tuesday the club will meet with Miss Basten at her home on Abruyn street.

Right Word, but What Was It? It had been a hard day, and Mr. K. smoked in silence one cigar after another. Mrs. K. was wondering how long it would be until her husband would say something. Jim is rather quiet for the most part, she will tell you. "I'll give him five more minutes," she agreed mentally, with her usual generosity. "I'd give a hundred dollars to know," Jim remarked abstractedly. His wife clapped her hands in delight. Jim never disappointed her. "What?" she asked. "Well, you see, it was this way: I was talking over a business deal with the head of the firm, and I got pretty enthusiastic, I guess. I must have used some big words. Suddenly the boss' hand came down on the table with a crash. 'You used the right word at that time, my boy. That's my idea exactly,' he exclaimed. "Well?" questioned his wife. "Nothing, only I'd give a hundred dollars to know what I said."—Indianapolis News.

Three Streets. In the world as known to Baedeker there are only two streets that can compare with Fifth avenue, and these are both on Manhattan Island. From its source in the asphalt bottoms of Washington square to where it loses itself in the coal middens of the Harlem river at One Hundred and Forty-third street the avenue runs a course of almost exactly seven miles. It runs true to the North star, without a turn, with only a single pause, grimly bent on its business in a way calculated to make the dowager metropolises of Europe lift their eyebrows and say, "How American!" Its rivals are Eighth avenue, a half mile to the west, which may be some 900 feet longer, and still farther west Tenth or Amsterdam avenue, the titan of all urban highways, nine miles up hill and down, as determined in the primordial blueprint shaped by the city fathers some time about the year 1800. All three streets have character as well as length, but Fifth avenue alone has significance.—Steeves Strunsky in Harper's Magazine.

Conscience and Love. To make conscience tolerable, love should be thrown around it. Conscience is the frame of character, and love is the covering for it.—Henry Ward Beecher.

New Use for Electricity. A theory has been advanced by a French scientist that electric currents can be made to take the place of food in sustaining life to a considerable degree.

A MODISH TAILOR.

A HIGH EFFECT.

Navy blue velvet makes this ultra effect. The skirt is rather straight under a redingote of three-quarters length. The redingote has a back cut on princess lines, and the front is a basque effect with a peplum of extreme fullness. The deep collar is of beaver, which also bands the peplum. Small metal buttons light up the sleeves and belt.

THE CHIMNEY POT.

Behold the Wide Brimmed Flat Sailor Evolved to This. Modish as possible, this fall hat is of beautiful silk beaver, a navy blue, with a narrow velvet brim and a band.

A FAUNTY FILL.

of wide grosgrain navy ribbon run through a slender steel buckle. This shape shares popularity with the postilion silk beaver and the regular "topper."

The Stylish Woman.

A stylish woman has a good poise. She stands well, and she walks well, and she carries her head well, and her clothes take on the right swing. Put the same clothes on the woman who stands on her heels instead of on the balls of her feet, the woman who sinks down in her corset and by so doing throws her abdomen outward, her hips forward, lets her chest sink in and her shoulders round forward, while her back hollows below the waist line—any amount of style in the costume worn by this woman is swallowed up by the lack of style in the woman herself.

The lines of a woman's gown or cloak are altered to their ruin when by incorrect carriage of her body they are turned and twisted out of place. The woman who is admired for her style in dressing looks—no matter what the time or the occasion—as if what she wears at that time, upon that occasion, had been planned with reference to that time, that place and to her.—Good Health.

Label the Boxes.

Every household has large boxes at least for hats, sometimes for furs and waists and other articles of dress and many small boxes for other belongings. In the hunt for something almost forgotten the housekeeper often squanders precious moments in searching through every likely depository and probably comes upon the object of her quest in the last box of the selected group.

All this waste of time and energy can be saved by the use of labels which record the contents of each box. Some recently noted captions of this kind were "Blue Velvet Hat," "J. B.'s Panama Hat," "Small Tacks and Nails," "Empty Bottles," "Corks."

ITALIAN BIG GUN READY FOR ACTION.

CORE OF THE EARTH.

Its Form a Mystery, but the Globe, as a Whole, is as Rigid as Steel.

The theory that the crust of the earth is only a few miles in thickness and rests upon an intensely heated molten interior is no longer tenable. It is now known that the earth, as a whole, possesses a high degree of effective rigidity, as great as if it were composed throughout of steel. It is no doubt true that the interior of the earth is in an intensely heated condition and that it appears to possess some of the qualities of a fluid. At the same time it behaves in many respects as a solid.

Professor Milne concludes from the velocities of seismic waves at different depths that the materials and general characters of the crust of the earth that are found at the surface may extend to a depth of about thirty miles, but beyond that the material seems to merge into a fairly homogeneous nucleus. This state probably extends to a depth of six-tenths of the radius, but the remaining four-tenths form a core which differs in its physical and possibly its chemical constitution from the outer portion. What the state of this nucleus is must be a matter largely of conjecture until we have a fuller knowledge of the state of matter when subjected to the vast pressure such as exists within the earth's interior.

Additional evidence that the earth, as a whole, is at least as rigid as steel is furnished by a study of tidal phenomena and also by the variation of latitude.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Squaring the Circle.

The origin of the problem squaring the circle is almost lost in the mists of antiquity, but there is a record of an attempted quadrature in Egypt 500 years before the exodus of the Jews. There is also a claim, according to Hesse, that the problem was solved by a discovery of Hippocrates, the geometer of Chios—not the physician—500 B. C. Now, the efforts of Hippocrates were devoted toward converting a circle into a crescent, because he had found that the area of a figure produced by drawing two perpendicular radiuses in a circle is exactly equal to the triangle formed by the line of junction. This is the famous theorem of the "Tangents of Hippocrates" and in the glauber salt out of the philosopher's stone, an example of the useful results which sometimes follow a search for the unattainable.

A Bearded Freak.

One of the earliest of the American bearded freaks was Louis Jasper, who lived in southern Virginia at about the time of the close of the Revolutionary war. His beard was nine and a half feet long and correspondingly thick and heavy. He could take his mustache between his fingers and extend his arms to their full length, and still the ends of the mustache were over a foot beyond his finger tips.

Inspiration.

Inspiration is the soul of achievement, the primal motive of creation the beginning of masterpiece.—Seated.

Personal Influence Counts.

The only responsibility that a man cannot evade in this life is the one he thinks of least—his personal influence.—Jordan.

Right Up to Date. Mother—Are you sure you can give my daughter all the luxuries and privileges enjoyed by the married women of her set? Suitor—I can give her town and country houses, motorcars, a string of polo ponies and dancing lessons at once, and a divorce and alimony within two years.—Life.

The Inevitable Thing.

"Did you get any stock in that balloon line project?" "Yes, but I think I paid for it more than it was worth."

"That is what was to be expected. An air line would naturally have inflated stock."—Baltimore American.

A Chance Yet.

Tom—Is it true that you proposed to Alice and were rejected? Jack—Not exactly rejected. She said when she felt like making a fool of herself she'd let me know.—Boston Transcript.

These Unthought Fads.

Maud—Don't you think there are just as good fish in the sea as ever were caught? Marie—Well, they're certainly unthought.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, Nov. 3.—Frank Hinkley, as a football coach at Yale, seems to be a failure.

No blue devils ever have been humbled as have those two that Hinkley has tutored. Yale never has been plunged into such impenetrable gloom as surrounds the sons of Eli now.

Hinkley took unto himself the coaching job in New Haven at the beginning of the 1914 season, and great things were expected. He was looked upon as the Moses who was to lead Yale out of the vale of defeat and humiliation into the promised land of championship. But Hinkley has floundered.

Friends of the Yale coach have tried to alibi his failure with the explanation that lack of material handicapped him. But that excuse lacks weight and lacks it badly.

Probably no college coach in the country has had more or better material to draw from than has Hinkley. The cream of the prep school football talent enters Yale and the sophomore classes of 1914 and 1915 have been given to Hinkley some of the best raw material that ever hoofed a gridiron. It needed only a bit of developing by Hinkley to bring it to championship perfection—and Hinkley failed.

The trouble with Hinkley seems to be that he tries to fit his men to a system instead of making the system fit the men. He tries to force them to do things that they cannot do naturally. He tries to get them to play along theoretical lines instead of along the practical.

The "lack of good material" excuse in Hinkley's behalf is shot to pieces when one recalls what Virginia and Washington & Jefferson did to Yale. Hinkley has had about 2,000 eligible students to draw from each year to make up his varsity squad while the Virginia coaches had to make up their team from about 600 eligibles and those at Washington & Jefferson could call on only about 200 eligibles.

Yet Bob Fowell, coach of W & J, drawing upon only 200 men of football calibre, was able to weld together a team in 1914 that beat the pick of Yale's 2,300 by the score of 13 to 7, while the 1915 W & J team beat Yale 16 to 7. The Virginia coaches, drawing on their 600 eligibles, were able to assemble a machine that walloped Yale, 10 to 0.

Last year when W & J beat Yale, the excuse was offered that Hinkley had a "green" team while Fowell had a veteran aggregation. But the case was a different one this year. Yale lost but a few of its stars by graduation; W & J's great 1914 team was shot to smithereens. Its backfield was lost, its line weakened and it lost. Crutcher, one of the best players in the country, was shot.

It was up to Fowell, with only a handful of material at his command to weld together an almost new team. He did it. Bulk was lacking in his 1915 material so he developed its speed—and he taught his men new tricks to offset the weight handicap of W & J's foes. The W & J team that we saw face Yale on the 23rd seemed 10 pounds lighter to a man, yet it outclassed Yale to such an extent that Yale looked like a grammar school eleven in comparison.

Can there be any better argument to back up a statement that Hinkley is a failure at Yale than to point out what Fowell, with a light "green" eleven did against Hinkley's bunch of huskies? Can there be any better proof of floundering than to show a college with an enrollment of about 450 twice beat a college with an eligible enrollment of 2,300?

Or can there be any better example of failure than to point to the fact that Harvard last year gave to Hinkley-coached Yale team the worst beating Yale has suffered in all its football history? It doesn't seem that lack of material is the excuse. It seems lack of tutoring. Hinkley has the material. He has had men with speed, with brains and with bulk. But he doesn't seem able to mold that into a machine that can smash its way to real victory.

The Yale team of 1914 suffered two beatings. The Hinkley supporter excused Hinkley and said: "Wait until next year." And so the populace waited. And what happened?

The Yale team this year, in its two starts, suffered two walloping, narrow escapes a third at the hands of Lehigh, and still has to face Princeton and Harvard.

Frank Hinkley, it seems to us, was a much better football player than he is a football coach.

HE DIDN'T KNOW PISTOL WAS LOADED

Mrs. James O. Sutton, of No. 92 Clinton avenue, was accidentally shot on Tuesday evening by her son, Monroe Sutton, who did not know that the revolver was loaded. The accident happened about 7 o'clock while the family and a few relatives were gathered about the supper table. The son was preparing to go hunting for deer today and the talk drifted to guns and the young man brought out his revolver which he had recently had overhauled and an accident occurred. Sutton and his brother, Oscar, who said that the chambers in the revolver would not revolve, Monroe said they would and pulled the trigger. A sharp explosion and a cry of pain from the mother followed. Mrs. Sutton was sitting at the table at the time her left arm resting on top of it. The bullet passed through the arm and entered her chest under the arm. Dr. Daniel Connolly was immediately summoned and attended her. There were fully half a dozen people in the room at the time the revolver went off. Mrs. Sutton was reported as resting comfortably today. She still has the bullet in her chest and it will probably be probed for as soon as she recovers from the nervous shock.

EXCELS IN ATHLETICS

War Makes America Supreme on the Track and Field.

Pick of Young Men of Germany, France and England Are on Firing Line, and Are Being Killed Off Like So Many Flies.

Despite the fact that Uncle Sam has been in a terrific sporting slump during the last year and has been most gloriously walloped at every start, there is one division which American supremacy is certain to be continued. That is on the track and field.

With American coaches and American methods (taking hold in the European countries there was a high hope over there that our revered uncle might be pushed on the skids during the Olympic games of 1916. That hope is now exploded, however. The games were scheduled to be held in Berlin, but with the intense hatred that has been stirred on the other side by the war, it is doubtful if England or France would compete even should peace be restored by that time. That puts one spoke in the hope of beating the United States, but the most tragic cause back of the collapse of European hopes lies in another direction.

The young men who were fast developing into sterling athletes and who might challenge our boys are now being killed off like flies! The pick of the young men of Germany, France and England are on the firing line. Some of Germany's most promising material for the Olympic games for 1916 were army officers or at least subject to the call to the colors. They answered, and their finely trained muscles are now carrying them on long forced marches. Feet that once sped over the cinder path are now treading through fields of blood or splashing in the mud or mire of the trenches. And this is true of the young men of England and France as well as of Germany.

Can you imagine what it would be to suddenly have our Ted Merediths, our Mal Sheppards, and a score or so of other young men at the peak of their athletic careers suddenly killed off! It is such a situation as this that the European countries face. If the war continues over an extended period, it may be safe to say that the United States will be supreme in athletics for another generation. The men rising up to challenge us are now offering their lives on the battlefields or undermining their wonderfully developed strength by exposure in rain-soaked trenches. If they escape with their lives they will return to their homes old men so far as athletics are concerned. Such conditions as this strike pretty close to what war really means. There will be little glory for the United States coming out of international contests for the next few years. While we have been enjoying peace and our athletes perfecting themselves, their foreign rivals have been shedding their blood on battlefields.

CAPTAIN MILES WORKS HARD

Leader of Naval Team Busily Engaged in Getting Raw Material Into Shape for Army Game.

"Smiling" Captain Miles, whose good work as back on the Navy team last season won for him the captaincy this year of Uncle Sam's Naval Academy team, is busily engaged in whipping the raw material of his team into shape. Of the result of the game between the Army and Navy team, Captain Miles is saying nothing, but his broad smile is an indication of what he expects to do to the Army.

Doesn't Worry Pete Russell. Capt. Pete Russell of the Chicago university eleven, is playing a brilliant game this season and gives no evidence of any worry or strain over the fact that he holds the captaincy of the eleven.

Literary Note. Made—My favorite authors are Browning and Henry James. I read them over and over again. Marjorie—You have to—Life.
